The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the admitted prior art (instant Figure 1) in view of Yamada et al 4955820.

The admitted prior art discloses a base portion, pushing surface, outwardly extending barbs, a contact arm 10 extending upwardly from the base portion, a lower portion extending downwardly from the base portion and including a leg and a tail 14, the tail being able to flex away from the leg. Tail 14 has an upright portion with first (left) and second (right) surfaces, the second surface being furthest away from the leg, a foot extending generally perpendicularly from the second surface of the upright portion in a direction away from the leg. The admitted prior art, however, does not disclose a notch between the leg and the tail. Yamada et al (Figure 5) discloses leg 13, and a tail with an upright portion 18 and a foot 17, there being an arch-shaped notch between the leg and the tail. It thus would have been obvious to provide a notch between the leg and the tail of the admitted prior art, as taught by Yamada et al, to permit movement therebetween and thus relieve stress on the solder joint made between the foot and a substrate. This would inherently result in the upright portion of the tail being longer than the leg, and the notch height being the same as the leg height, and in any event would have been obvious to facilitate soldering to a substrate.

Applicant's arguments filed February 4, 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. As noted above, the admitted prior art does disclose tail 14 having an upright portion with first (left) and second (right) surfaces, the second surface being furthest away from the leg, a foot extending generally perpendicularly from the second surface of the upright portion in a direction away from the leg.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
